

These Greek island hotels have caught our eye over the past few years, drawing those in search of a slice of island life across the country.

ANDRONIS ARCADIA, SANTORINI

The best spot for a sundowner

Low-slung white-washed villas tumbling down to the sea provide bags of space here. On an island that's usually packed to the brim with honeymooners and sunset seekers, each villa has its own private balcony and pool facing the ocean – which means you can lap up Santorini's beautiful scenery without another person in sight. There's a beach-club-style pool and bar, and a very clever spa, too.
